Gina Rossi has a diverse civil litigation practice that focuses on a variety of claims, including FELA claims and OSHA investigations, construction defect defense, and personal injury defense. Her personal injury experience includes defense of claims involving premises liability, products liability, transportation/trucking, and medical malpractice. She also handles professional liability claims on behalf of insurance and real estate agents. She has experience in all phases of litigation, from the immediate investigation of catastrophic incidents through trial and appeal. She has represented various construction related entities, property management companies, assisted living and skilled nursing facilities, physicians, railroads, trucking companies, and individuals facing licensing matters with the Colorado Department of Regulatory Agencies.

Gina previously worked for Johnson & Bell, Ltd. and the Chicago Transit Authority in Chicago, Illinois where she gained experience in general negligence defense, insurance defense, insurance coverage, bad faith, and medical fraud.

Gina's diverse litigation experience provides her with a unique perspective on each case that results in the most desirable outcome for her clients. Since moving to Denver from Chicago, Gina has obtained defense verdicts in several cases with seven-figure pretrial demands.
