Mr. Lyman is a trial attorney with a diverse litigation practice. Based on a broad-spectrum of experience in defending catastrophic personal injury claims, including serious brain, spinal cord, and burn injuries, Mr. Lyman guides his clients through the complex process of investigation, discovery, mediation, and trial.

Energy and transportation companies rely on him to defend claims of personal injury and property damage arising out of mining operations, oil and gas exploration, oil field service operations, cranes, and trucking/transportation activities.

Mr. Lyman handles large and frequent product liability claims arising out of alleged recurrent design, manufacturing defects, or recall problems.

Mr. Lyman represents national retail chains and various national and local property owners in connection with the full range of tort claims.

Companies have also called upon Mr. Lyman to assist with disputed commercial transactions, including litigation of insurance coverage, bad faith, unfair claim practices, misappropriation of intellectual property, and contract disputes.
