Her services typically involve real property (design, construction, development, management, sale, foreclosure), health care (professional employment, HIPAA compliance, business and software agreements, fertility law), and defense of legal malpractice claims. She has represented large and small businesses and individuals in a wide range of matters.

For the last fifteen years, a portion of Susan's practice has been dedicated to establishing and protecting family rights in assisted reproductive technology arrangements. She has obtained remedies for LGBTQ+ parents and their children, including two groundbreaking Montana Supreme Court decisions, routinely represents parties in surrogacy and gamete or embryo donation arrangements, and is recognized as a fertility law authority in Montana.
