Gina Rossi is a trial lawyer with a broad civil litigation practice focused on defending businesses, professionals, and individuals in complex litigation. Her experience includes transportation, premises liability, medical malpractice, wrongful death, catastrophic injury, construction, and professional liability matters. She regularly represents national railroad companies in litigation involving the Federal Employers' Liability Act (FELA) and railroad crossing collisions. Her clients have included construction and property management companies, healthcare providers and facilities, trucking companies, and professionals facing regulatory and licensing matters. Gina has tried cases in state and federal courts across five states and represents clients at every stage of litigation, from initial investigation through appeal.

Before moving to Denver, Gina practiced law in Chicago with Johnson & Bell, Ltd. and the Chicago Transit Authority.

Gina is also a trained mediator and welcomes opportunities to assist parties in resolving disputes.
